Forecast For Northern Ireland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 10 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wet and windy.

Today:
Any early brightness in the east will soon fade with thickening cloud and outbreaks of rain developing through the morning. The rain heavy at times with fresh to strong south or southwest winds, gales around the coast. Brighter again later. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Mostly cloudy with showers or longer outbreaks of rain, heavy at times. The showers becoming well scattered later in the night, drier and clearer spells by dawn. Remaining windy. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Thursday:
Bright spells and heavy blustery showers, these wintry on high ground. The risk of hail and the odd rumble of thunder. Feeling cold in the strong westerly winds. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Feeling cold with heavy blustery showers on Friday, wintry on high ground. More persistent rain and hill snow possible late in the day. Bright spells and showers over the weekend.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.